California Proposition 65 is a law that was passed in the US state of California in 1986. The aim is to guarantee clean drinking water and protect the population from hazardous chemicals. The basis for this is a list of currently over 1030 substances and compounds, similar to the REACH SVHC list.

The law applies to the marketing of consumer goods in the state of California.

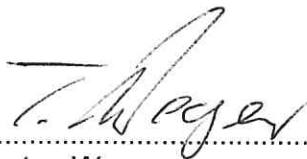

The products manufactured by Novotechnik are not consumer products and are not sold to end users.

Therefore, Novotechnik is NOT affected by California Proposition 65. Our products do not require a warning label under the law. However, they may contain listed substances such as e.g. lead.

Some of our products contain e.g. lead (CAS no. 7439-92-1) as an alloy component of steel, aluminum, ... above the limit value (>0.1%) according to REACH (1907/2006).

Further information can be found at www.novotechnik.de, in our REACH declaration or under products with SCIP numbers.
